LONDON, March 5.

In the House of Commons last night the Treasury Treasury Borrowing Bill was read the third time.

During the debate Lord Hugh Cecil (Unionist), in answering a remark of Mr. Asquith, the great majority of the House regarded it as incredible that the Government would reject the Budget, recalled the remark of Mr. Lloyd-George about the Budget being a rat-trap.

When Mr. A. Stanley Wilson (Unionist) mentioned the House that Lord Ribblesdale, a supporter of the Government, in the House of Lords had described Mr. Lloyd-George as half pantalon and half highwayman, the Speaker objected to such a statement, but was unable to compel a withdrawal because the remark was contained in quotations from speeches from the other House, which were frequently used in the election.

Mr. Wilson explained that he mentioned the comparison because the methods of Mr. Lloyd-George in the House and in the country had produced the present situation.

Mr. Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared that the Government would not accept responsibility for using the Budget to raise the income tax, which demand was not prepared to enforce, but the Government was prepared to receive any income tax voluntarily tendered.

If Mr. Lloyd-George continued, the Government sent to the House of Lords a bill for a single tax, the Government would surrender the right it had gained when Mr. Gladstone in 1861 circumvented the Lords by putting the taxes in one bill which the House of Lords must accept or reject as a whole.

WAR LOAN REDEMPTION.

The War Loan Redemption Bill for £21,330,000 for a loan of 1900 was read the third time in the House of Commons.

THE BUDGET DELAY.

PREMIER BLAMES THE LORDS.

TORY HOUSE OF LORDS.

MR. BALFOUR'S IDEAL.

A STRONGER SECOND CHAMBER.

A FIGHT WITH REVOLUTION.

LONDON, March 5.

The City of London Unionist Association yesterday entertained at a banquet Mr. A. J. Balfour and Sir Frederick Balfour, the two sons of the late Lord Balfour of Burleigh.

Mr. Balfour, in responding to the toast of his health, said: "The last Parliamentary fortnight has demolished the glowing picture painted by the enthusiastic brush of Radical Journalists. The Government's own followers have charged Ministers with every sort of extravagance and the breach of their clearest pledges. We have seen weekly changes of the plans of surrender."

"If the original pledge consisted in insisting at the very beginning of the session on the Sovereign giving unconstitutional guarantees, it would be so scandalous that any device might be justified to enable the Government to get out of it."

"The constituencies have justified the action of the House of Lords. Ministers are unable to pass the Budget."

Mr. Balfour said that he wanted not a better, but a stronger, second chamber.

Not another House of Commons, or too strong, which would arrogate to itself the powers of the immediately representative chamber, but it should be powerful enough to resist temporary gusts of opinion, and representing more accurately than the Commons the permanent opinion of the country."

Radicals desired no social reform but revolution. Social reforms were complicated, and necessarily were gradual, and it was impossible that they should run side by side with revolution. The policy of the Government would involve a revolutionary or an anti-revolutionary struggle.

For a long time the country would sit down under a single-chamber system. Socialists, Radicals, and Nationalists were not going to be in power for ever.

One revolution would breed another. Abolition of the veto of the House of Lords, Mr. Redmond told them, was a great step.

KING LEOPOLD'S MILLIONS.

TAINTED MONEY.

DAUGHTERS RENOUNCE CLAIMS.

LONDON, March 5.

Princess Louise of Belgium declared that if her father, the late King Leopold, had been the beneficiary of a third party she would make no claim to it. She hoped that the Government would inform her of the right of the State had not been established, and to which they therefore would be entitled to succeed.

Mr. Vandervelde (Socialist), in the course of an intervention in the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, stated that it was now found that King Leopold had invested £2,800,000 in companies directed by men of straw, including £1,000,000 in Congo bonds. Money which was stained with blood ought to revert to Belgium to improve the lot of the negro.

The Government admitted that King Leopold had deceived it, and stated that the Government would uphold the rights of the nation.

M. L. de Lathauere, Minister for Justice, stated that money derived from the royal foundations would be employed for the benefit of the natives, thereby showing the sincerity of Belgium.

Other speakers asserted that £1,200,000 had disappeared from the Congo Treasury, and that books and papers relating to this money had been destroyed.

M. de Weeste, who moved a motion of confidence in the Government, paid a tribute to the sincerity of the Belgian people, and stated that the Government was not to be deceived by the Princesses, daughters of the late King.

A resolution from the Left (Radicals and Socialists) was negatived by 70 votes to 61, and M. de Weeste's motion of confidence was adopted.

PHILADELPHIA TRAM STRIKE.

LONDON, March 4.

The Mayor, Mr. Gwynne, proposed to abolish all taxes on personal property, substituting increased rates on real estate. He says that the present system is a source of bribery and extortion, the assessment of personal estates being left to the caprice of the assessors.

Mr. Balfour, who is a member of the Philadelphia Board of Commissioners, said that the present system is a source of bribery and extortion, the assessment of personal estates being left to the caprice of the assessors.
